SEEK PHILIP'S GOLD

Effort to Salvage Spanish Galleon Goes Merrily On.

Treasure Seekers Refuse to Give Up Hope of Securing Wealth From Flagship of Commander of "Invincible Armada."

Little did the duke of Medina-Sidonia, admiral in chief of the Invincible Armada, dream, as with high hopes he set sail from the Tagus on May 29, 1588, that his great galleon, the Florencia, would be sunk off Tobemory, on the coast of Scotland, and would be supplying treasure trove to adventurous spirits more than three centuries later in the year of grace 1919.

The Florencia, which was popularly reported to be filled with gold, jewels and silver plate, fled northward with her sister vessels in frantic attempt to get back to Spain by rounding the north of Scotland after the fatal war council had decided to abandon the unequal fight in the narrow seas of the English channel. This was the decision which caused Sir Francis Drake to write jubilantly to Walsingham on July 31: "There was never anything pleased me better than the seeing the enemy flying with a southerly wind to the northward. We have the Spaniards before us, and mind, with the grace of God, to wrestle a pull with them."

The doomed ship had reached Tobemory when MacLean of Morven by a well-directed shot succeeded in setting fire to her powder magazine. The resultant explosion scattered the vessel and her contents far and wide over the sea bed. The immense wealth which she was believed to have on board has from that time to this exercised over many minds as potent a fascination and spell as ever was wielded by dreams of discovering the treasures hidden by the buccaners who sailed the southern seas.

At length, after several desultory attempts at reaching her, a salvage company was formed in 1908, and operations, begun then, have been continued intermittently ever since. Enough was discovered to encourage perseverance, though not to reward enterprise—blunderbusses, swords, scabbards, a bronze cannon and a few doubloons. Several recent signs, however, indicate that the searchers are at last on the right track and will soon strike the main haul. Then, if ever, should the ship's stronghold yield up its long-lost treasure and add one more to the romances of the deep.

Mixup in Relationships.

Adoption proceedings before Judge Raymond Dobb presented a complex situation that lawyers are trying to figure out, writes a Syracuse (N. Y.) correspondent. James and Lucy Lowtwell were born six years ago. Their mother, Mrs. Lucy Lowtwell, wife of James Lowtwell, died shortly after their birth. Their father married again and then Percy McDonald, brother-in-law of the deceased Mrs. Lowtwell, adopted Lucy. Charles Singer, brother of the deceased Mrs. Lowtwell, adopted Jimmie.

Lucy must now call her own brother Cousin Jimmie. Her own father becomes Uncle Jim. Her hitherto Uncle Percy now becomes papa. While she will always revere the memory of the departed mother, she must regard her maternal parent as a deceased aunt, at least in the law. Her own cousins, the children of her adoptive parents, become her brothers and sisters, and the same holds true of little Jimmie. Lucy's now legal father becomes uncle to her own brother, while her stepmother she must address as auntie.

Historic Inn to Be Sold.

The famous Saracen's Head Inn at Southwell, Eng., in which many American tourists have found entertainment, is to be sold at auction. Its history as a hotel runs back through 500 years.

In its early days the house was called "The King's Arms." King Charles I. stayed at the inn during the Civil Wars. Charles surrendered himself to the Scottish Commissioners on May 6, 1646, in the coffee room. The bedroom which that monarch used on the night before he gave himself up is still well preserved. Other English kings also stopped at the ancient hotel.

Arts and Crafts in Australia.

Determined to revive interest in arts and crafts work, the executive of the Arts and Crafts Society for Victoria has invited the craft workers of the commonwealth to send exhibits without entrance fees to the annual exhibition in Melbourne in November. The exhibition will include examples of pottery, toy-making, metal work, stained glass, modeling, lace and leather work, engraving and etching, and design of poster work. Designs must be original, and if possible have an Australian motif. The fact that a number of disabled soldiers have taken up arts and crafts work will add additional interest to the exhibition.

Were Built to Last.

The extraordinary tenacity of building materials was what most impressed a British architect visiting the war area. He frequently saw arches with only one abutment still held firmly in position by cohesion, though loaded with heavy walls, and in the Market hall of St. Quentin an iron column with base shot away was still held upright by the superstructure it was designed to support.

Harmful Dust in Factories.

The dust in various industrial establishments is found by Professor Winslow of Yale Medical school, to range from about one-twentieth of a grain of solid particles per 100 cubic feet of air in a good metal polishing shop to 12 grains in a textile factory. But while a carpet or blanket mill yields more dust than such industries as pottery, asbestos, tobacco and steel-grinding, little of it is inorganic matter, and it is the dust from abrasive materials that seems most harmful and is said most to produce tuberculosis.

NO SPOONING IN AIRPLANES

Sheer Impossibility of Sociability While Flying May Constitute Bar to Popularity.

The most fatal thing of all at the present time to the popularity of flying is its unsociability. The pilot may have the profile of a Greek god, but if every time he turns it to speak it is necessary to shut off the engine, and one's heart stops, too, it is difficult to think of a witty response. And mostly he does not turn it. All one has for company is the upper two-thirds of the back of a leather helmet. As a match-making proposition the airplane is a failure. And as for descending to some flowery meadow and there saying all the things he has been thinking up while in the air, I can only say personally that after two hours of flying, I was stone deaf, and I wouldn't have known whether he was telling me he adored me or was asking me if I wanted a drink of water.

I was quite deaf for some time. We landed at an army aviation field before a lot of ground mechanics and flyers, and if I expected that the removal of my goggles and discovery of my sex was going to make any sensation I was disappointed. D'you think they ran up and shook me by the hand and observed that I was a brave woman?

They did not. A man in overalls came up and I gathered by lip reading and his gestures that he weren't wanted where we were, and to move on down the field and park somewhere else. No newspaper men, no excitement, no cameras. Was this thing to be lost to the world?—Mary Roberts Rinehart, in Saturday Evening Post.

IS AIRMEN'S PATRON SAINT

Michael, With His Wings and Spear, Is Peculiarly Qualified for That High Position.

It was the wing of St. Michael, chief of the archangels and head of the celestial militia, which Jeanne d'Arc heard, they say, whirling about her in the little garden of Domremy when she had her softly spoken but insistent call to arms. And now, as if it were not enough to be the one who called Jeanne d'Arc from Domremy to Rouen, St. Michael is also the patron saint of aviators, because he heads celestial warriors and battles in the air.

In a London church on Spanish place—the church to which King Alfonso went when he was there—there is a new stained window with an airplane modeled into its design, and that window is dedicated to St. Michael, patron saint of airmen.

St. George met his dragon on the earth, but St. Michael battled with the devil and his angels in the celestial spaces and threw them out of heaven. With his wings and his spear he was the great prototype of the armored airplane, and it may be that even the inspiring Jeanne d'Arc did not satisfy him and that he has always kept in his mind this time when men should fly and fight as he did.—New York Evening Post.

Horse Adapts Itself to Change.

The horse, which as Thomas Winans predicts, will be extinct ten years hence, has shown a remarkable knack of adapting itself to changing geological periods. The animal has increased in height, while others have shrunk and disappeared; but the fossil remains of horses, only a few inches high, which roamed our planet at least two million years ago, are almost perfect models of the existing type. The most marked change has been in its feet. Beginning with five toes to each foot, the horse has been shedding a toe occasionally, now the only one-toed mammal known to naturalists. That and progressive increase in its size have been the only evolutionary processes which the horse found necessary so as to keep its place in the sun. As a worker, weight for weight, it beats the elephant hollow.—Exchange.

Languages of Belgium.

Belgium has two chief languages: Flemish in East Flanders and West Flanders, in Antwerp, Limburg and Brabant provinces, or the north and east; French in the province of Liege, Namur and Hainaut and in Luxembourg. The French-speaking claim to descend from the Belgians, called Walloons. In 1910, of the 7,423,784 people of Belgium, 3,220,682 spoke only Flemish, 2,333,334 spoke only French, 871,278 spoke both Flemish and French, 31,415 spoke German, 74,983 spoke French and German, 8,652 spoke Flemish and German, 52,547 spoke all three languages.

He Should Worry.

"Della," said Mrs. Barrows sternly, "I met that policeman today who sat in the kitchen with you so long last night. I took advantage of the opportunity to speak to him."

"Oh, go on now," replied Della, with a smile. "We needn't think that'll make me wan bit jealous, mum. Oh, I have got him safe enough."—New York Globe.

Thought Snake Was Round.

Little Joan, who had often been told to be sure of a statement before he made it, was sitting his grandparents on the farm. One day he rushed into the house exclaiming:

"I saw a snake out there, grandpa."

"What kind of snake was it?" asked grandpa.

"I am not right sure," said little Joan, "but I think it was a round one."

Had the Resemblance.

Clarence had a dog of which he was fond. Being one of a number of children who looked much alike, he had heard the family resemblance remarked upon frequently. One day a neighbor, meeting Clarence in the street with his pet, asked him jokingly who the dog looked like. Taking the question seriously, the boy replied: "Oh, Bover has the family resemblance, I guess."

Out of accumulated capital have arisen all the successes of industry and applied science, all the comforts and small pleasures of the common lot. Upon it the world must depend for the process of reconstruction in which all have to share.

—JAMES J. HILL.

The Successful Farmer Raises Bigger Crops

and cuts down costs by investment in labor-saving machinery.

Good prices for the farmers' crops encourage new investment, more production and greater prosperity.

But the success of agriculture depends on the growth of railroads—the modern beasts of burden that haul the crops to the world's markets.

The railroads—like the farms—increase their output and cut down unit costs by the constant investment of new capital.

With fair prices for the work they do, the railroads are able to attract new capital for expanding their facilities.

Rates high enough to yield a fair return will insure railroad growth, and prevent costly traffic congestion, which invariably results in poorer service at higher cost.

National wealth can increase only as our railroads grow.

Poor railroad service is dear at any price. No growing country can long pay the price of inadequate transportation facilities.

Of course, you want a Fordson

THE Fordson is an ideal tractor for your farm. It is built compactly, simply, yet with abundant power. It pulls a two bottom plow and will do a proportionate amount of any other farm power work.

The Fordson engine is unusual. It is simple, easily cared for, and so designed that the farmer can give any attention required in service. The entire head of the cylinders, which are cast en bloc, can be removed for grinding valves.

The air is cleaned with an improved air washer. A special carburetor allows the use of kerosene—without any of the trouble that is commonly associated with this fuel.

The Oliver No. 7 Plow was built for your Fordson

The Oliver No. 7 plow in addition to being specially adapted to the Fordson tractor has all its well-known Oliver features. It buries the weeds and trash; it is operated from the driver's seat; the furrow is always kept at the same depth by a special stop device; in fact, it is an ideal tractor plow designed for that one purpose only.

See it here with the Fordson tractor.
